INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION WEEK

International Education Week is a vehicle for celebrate the benefits of international education and exchange and takes places each November at colleges and universities across the U.S. round the world. The week was initiated by the U.S. Department of State and the U.S. Department of Education.

The centerpiece of the week as celebrated at Beloit College is the International Symposium.

The November 2012 celebration and Beloit College featured:

- Mapping the world. A hands-on events in which students create visual representations of their experiences abroad.
- International Poetry Reading. Poems in their original languages read by members of the Beloit College campus community
- International Symposium. Day-long event of presentations by students on their international experiences
- Karaoke Night. Sponsored by the International Student Club.

Also scheduled:

- meals from around the world served throughout the week in Commons
- displays in the Beloit College Library

Unfortunately, the Ivan and Janice Stone annual lecture, normally held the evening of the International Symposium, had to be cancelled due to death in the lecturer’s family. The lecture honors the memories of Prof. Ivan Stone and his wife Janice Shrimpton Stone, who helped create and sustain Beloit College’s international program.
